An Expedition to Zymurgia

Being a narrative of the expedition undertaken in the year 680 by Dr. Thintwhistle and his colleagues Thomas Carbuncle and Dr. Thaddeus Philpott, all of Glastonbury University, of their explorations in the remote land of Zymurgia, and of the divers incidents which occurred on the journey there and back again.

Author's Note

Readers familiar with my accounts of my earlier travels with Thomas Carbuncle will recall that Mr. Carbuncle and I made a short foray into Zymurgia some years ago. Due to a lack of supplies and the onset of inclement weather, we spent fewer days there than we would have wished, but returned to our base in Seros, and thence ultimately home again. Happily, we were able to rectify matters on our most recent journey, an account of which the reader now has before him.

We present this volume in the hope that, by reading it, our audience will be as entertained and edified as we were by the experiences related herein.
